Survival skills are techniques that a person may use in order to sustain life in any type of natural environment or built environment. These techniques are meant to provide basic necessities for human life which include water, food, and shelter. The skills also support proper knowledge and interactions with animals and plants to promote the sustaining of life over a period of time.

The following list of skills is pretty exhaustive, but it will be of no use if you don't approach things in the right way. A guide which is often used is Maslow's "hierarchy of needs". This starts with the "physiological", in order: air (probably a given in any environment), water, food, shelter, sleep, clothing.

Bushcraft is a popular term for wilderness survival skills. The term was popularized in the Southern Hemisphere by Les Hiddins (the Bush Tucker Man) as well as in the Northern Hemisphere by Mors Kochanski and recently gained considerable currency in the United Kingdom due to the popularity of Ray Mears and his bushcraft and survival television programs. It is also becoming popular in urban ...
