through intelligent information processing. CAE is a technology that enables computer analysis of the design, created within CAD (Computer Aided Design) technology. By the application of CAE technology it is now possible to have a much better linking of design, testing and design improvement, which are the development phases

Information Processing and Intelligence 5 deductive reasoning. Lopez et al. (1997) developed models of knowledge about animals held by American college students and by the Itzaj Maya, a Central American group of forest dwellers. They found that the formal mechanisms for holding information about animals were similar for both groups.
