The idea of the hyperreal system is to extend the real numbers  $\mathbb{R}$  to form a system  ${}^*\mathbb{R}$  that includes infinitesimal and infinite numbers, but without changing any of the elementary axioms of algebra. Any statement of the form "for any number  $x$ ..." that is true for the reals is also true for the hyperreals.

Given the net response rate of 5.2%, a nonresponse bias analysis was conducted, following the methodology suggested by Ary et al. (1996), which involved comparing earlier with later respondents. There were no statistically significant differences between the two groups in the variables of interest, hence it was concluded that nonresponse bias is not an issue in this data set.

In terrorem, Latin for "into/about fear", is a legal threat, usually one given in hope of compelling someone to act without resorting to a lawsuit or criminal prosecution. For example, many intellectual property attorneys send in terrorem letters, which threaten litigation absent compliance with the written request, to persons that are violating their clients' trademark rights before resorting ...
