Quantitative definition. In describing the redundancy of raw data, the rate of a source of information is the average entropy per symbol. For memoryless sources, this is merely the entropy of each symbol, while, in the most general case of a stochastic process, it is $H = \lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \frac{1}{n} H(X_1, \dots, X_n)$, the limit, as n goes to infinity, of the joint entropy of the first n symbols divided by n .
